CRYSTAL.

Every one around here has had to replant their garden. Corn is in and nearly all are getting ready to work on the road. A survey was through this section and the one north, running a ditch. It is badly needed. Mr. Cook came near losing a valuable horse. The halter was tied too long and he got his hind foot over it. Ed. Smith lost a horse the same way last winter. John Medall had the misfortune to break his leg while logging last Saturday. Mr. Daniels has sold his building to Mr. Hively. Mr. Miller took the stock. Mr. Daniels will move to Carson soon. Jacob Rindio of Briton visited his mother last week. Mrs. Wade Rockwell came near having a paralytic stroke last week.

PERRINTON.

A Kirk's two daughters and sons-in-law are paying their parents a visit this week. Miss Minnie Gillett is paying her parents a visit at present writing. Miss Gillett is private secretary to James M. Turner, of Lansing. The address by Hon. J. M. Kverden, on Decoration Day, was highly spoken of. A large attendance greeted him and the exercises were pronounced a success. Ernest Genhart is hauling music around by the wagon load, of late, at this place. It appears, at present, that Perrinton will be without a saloon the present year. Well, this is as it ought to be; at least it is as it ought to be as far as the town's interest is concerned. The township board met to consider the liquor bonds of a Mr. Murry who asked to start a saloon at Middleton. They decided that if he could produce a good and sufficient bond for $5,000 they would grant his request. I noticed in last week's correspondence from Newark that chicken thieves had been seen at or near the premises of Rev. Beecher, and that they started for Perrinton. Now, I want it distinctly understood that Perrinton don't have any chicken thieves; and if the correspondents intended to cast reflections in that direction, he must substantiate the charges or swift retribution will surely come. Hear?

BEEBE.

Remember the Ladies' Aid society at Mrs. Maynard's next Friday afternoon and evening. The young people's class of the M. E. church cleared $12.71 at their ice cream social Saturday evening. Children's day will be observed at the M. E. church next Sunday. Clarence Johnson and wife of Ithaca were the guests of Mrs. Newton over Sunday. Mrs. H. M. Lane and two sons of Keweenaw, Wyoming, a lady who has voted for the president of the United States, is the guest of Mrs. Mary Spears. Mr. Seaman of Kent county, who has been visiting his son William, has returned home. W. A. Leet, J. N. McCall, J. T. Matthews, Mr. Cook, and a couple of the Stone boys were down on their wheels, last Saturday evening. They seemed to think the weather grew warmer the nearer they got here, and it would seem so to judge from their appearance. Never mind, but come again; will give you a good dish of ice cream, without any real time. Geo. Presler raised the frame for a new barn, one day last week. "W. say, did you hear about that little gambler? That's what makes Ezra look so smiling. It's papa now.

ELM HALL.

Decoration day was fittingly observed by the members of the Post and W. R. C. of our little town in which the school and some citizens joined heartily which is just as it should be. Our school closed on the 31st, with exercises in the evening. An address by Prof. Ralf Ely of Alma which was pronounced good by all who attended. Also the school social held at Blair's hall in the evening was voted a success and netted something like ten dollars. Miss Frederick, our primary teacher left for her home in McBride this morning, having made up her mind to engage in the schools of that place. Mr. Vandeventer leaves for his home in a few days. The Elm Hall ball team played two matched games on decoration day and came out a head in both, one was played with Sumner and the other with Vestaburg, which speaks well for them, for so warm a day. We were pleased to see the pleasant face of Com. O. G. Tuttle and Lady in our town at the commencement exercises of our school and to know that where encouragement is needed to the young that he may always be found. Ray Shaler returned from Mecosta county where he has been at work for some time but says only for a visit. We notice on our streets S. S. Ramsey the Portland Bridge man and rejoice to know that Sumner needs no bridges this year. The M. E. Sunday school will hold children's day services at their church on Sunday the 16th inst. Farmers are already beginning to complain about wheat and grass looking so poorly and say that between the frost and dry weather both are nearly ruined. We see that our commissioner of highways is at work on the road warrants and hope that our overseer will notice that a few loads of clay on our sandy roads makes a great improvement.

FOREST HILL.

Mrs. Edgar Sias enjoyed a visit from her mother and sister last week. Charlie Hayes is sick. Mrs. Edith Morgan of Bear Lake is visiting her relatives west of here. Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Koon visited at Hastings last week. The Elm Grove band furnished some nice music at the K. O. T. M. entertainment last Friday evening. B. K. Hoffman closed his school in Osceola county last Friday and is now visiting friends here and at St. Louis. The Christian society are getting the material on the ground to build a parsonage. The Children's day exercises at the Christian church last Sunday evening were a success in every way and the audience was delighted with a beautiful poem, finely rendered by Miss Belle Ironmonger of St. Louis. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gallagher were called home from Bay View the first of the week by the severe illness of his mother. The Christian Ladies' aid society gave an ice cream social at the residence of G. F. Hoffman last evening.

BRECKENRIDGE.

Mell Conklin had a finger badly lacerated while handling a barrel of oil. Decoration day was a gala day; about 2,000 people were present. Chas. Valentine of Albion was an accomplished speaker. Mrs. Dr. Bliss was remarkably interesting. Mrs. Dr. Bliss was expected H. R. Patterson didn't take any back seat, and his true American patriotism and respect for the old soldier and the flag he fought under, and his honest endeavor to instill a little of that fire and zeal into the minds of the younger portion of the gathering we hope was not a failure, and the merited rebuke administered to the noisy, talkative occupants of a portion of the grand stand might profitably be accepted by not a few older people among the audience. And the band from their exalted position far above the crowd discoursed some very fine music, and let us not forget the vocal and instrumental music from the grand stand, though but a very few could hear it. The G. A. R. attendance was good, about 40 of the St. Louis post and some from Ithaca being among them, and from all the surrounding villages. The monument was unveiled, but not in its permanent position, for the contractor had not done his part and it was not finished, thereby disappointing many but none more than those most connected with it. The graves of our honored dead were appropriately decorated previous to the services, and we noticed the graves of the K. O. T. M. dead were beautifully decorated; and we understand they have a custom of their own in so doing; and we will venture the assertion that the beautiful custom will soon prevail among the other fraternal societies, who were invited to participate in the G. A. R. parade, failed to appear at the proper time or our parade would have been a very imposing one. The collection taken up after the services Decoration day to go to finish paying for the monument amounted to $20.00. The said our laws relative to the saloon and the minors are being shamefully disregarded here, and our best citizens would rejoice to see the saloon closed lawfully. The former saloon is vacant and was used for a dance. Decoration evening, fit symbol of its former debasing influence. Mrs. Aldrich has gone on the lakes as a fireman of a boat. A strange woman, a Miss Turnbull, was discovered here in a demoralized state. Proper authorities at Ithaca were notified, and she was taken away. Mrs. N. Grisham, who fell and cut her hand on some broken crockery so she was unable to use it, is back from a several days' visit among relatives in Lafayette. Rev. Conklin got hooked in the side by a cow Sunday afternoon, and the doctor took three stitches in it. The Bacon laureate sermon was preached at the Congregational church last Sunday by Rev. McGresham. We have but two graduates this year, Misses La. Dow and Holbert. Dr. Howe has his sister from Jackson visiting him for a few days. Cut worms are reported to be doing very destructive work in the cornfields.

ST. LOUIS.

The base ball grounds on Rennels driving park have been graded and a game between Alma and St. Louis will be played tomorrow. The repairs on the Harrington house are nearly completed and the same will be opened up soon. One case of scarlet fever is reported in this place. Frank Shannon spent Sunday in Ann Arbor, visiting his uncle. Last Sunday was "Fireman's day" in this place. See report of the same in another column. The Gonculb has weekly "shoots." We would advise some of them to do a little practicing. L. A. Drury has a gang of men clearing up his farm, west of town. Wm. Sullivan is employed by the business men as night watch. Rev. H. H. Ford will preach to the K. O. T. M. lodge next Sunday. The Baptist celebrated their 15th anniversary Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. The Royal Arcanum of Ithaca, Alma and St. Louis will run a special excursion train to Grand Lodge next Friday, June 14th. Train leaves St. Louis at 6:20 a.m. Fare for round trip $1.25.

THEORY AND PRACTICE.

Paper read by D. S. Parker before the Emerson Farmers Club Friday, March 9th, 1895.

In all the undertakings of life man has a theory as to the right method of attaining an end, but when he attempts to put his theory into practice, how many things come in that were not seen in the beginning! So, when the result is worked out, if it is worked out, the methods have been so different from the way marked out by the theory with which he started that it would hardly seem that they bear any resemblance to each other. It is quite easy for us in the winter to plan the work for the coming summer; but how difficult when summer comes to execute these plans. So, instead of planting a field to corn or potatoes about the middle of May, as we intended, we sow to buckwheat in mid-summer, or to flat turnips still later. What shall we say then have no ideal work without a theory or a plan? By no means; let us think and know what we are trying to accomplish, have our ideal high and strive with all the energy we possess to reach it. Whether it be in the every day pursuits of life, or in the higher realms of moral and spiritual attainment, we should aim at nothing short of perfection. For, though it is easy to fall below our ideal, we shall never rise above it. If we do not aim high, our attainments will be meager indeed. We after hear the theory advanced that it is no more difficult to buy butter according to the grade than it is wheat. If that theory is correct, butter would be bought and graded as wheat and other grains are; for the merchants are just as anxious to buy one on a paying basis as the other, or would be if there was as much at stake in one case as in the other, and just as soon as they think it is for their financial interest they will doubtless make the attempt. They are not doing business as philanthropists or for their health but have all they can do to make a living and show a balance on the right side of the ledger. It may be said it is their duty to grade butter; justice to their customers demands it. But it is said duty does not lead in two directions at the same time; and after a man invests all his capital and his credit as well, in a store and stock of goods, it would seem a duty he owes himself, his family, and his creditors, that he do all he honestly can to meet these obligations. To do this he must have customers and be careful not to offend; so he bears injury and insult, and even takes in poor butter "with a smile that is childlike and bland." This better question as well as other questions is easier solved in theory than in practice. Let us be thankful that we can be more independent and strive to elevate our profession until, instead of bringing up the rear, we shall place it in the position it should rightfully occupy at the head of the procession, this can not be accomplished by muscle alone, but we must work with brain as well as brawn.

The only remedy in the world that will at once stop itching of the skin in any part of the body, that is absolutely safe and never-failing, is Doan's Ointment. Get it from your dealer.

Lobsters Milked by Eels.

Capt. Ashbury Adams, who has been connected with the United States fish commission for a number of years, and has had a large experience in hatching deep-sea fish at Ten Pound Island and Wood's Hole, gave a talk on fish hatching before the Business Men's association the other evening, says a Gloucester (Mass.) dispatch to the Boston Herald. He said that last year the work of hatching lobster eggs was begun at Ten Pound Island, and one hundred million young lobsters were hatched and liberated. He said he had seen eels suck eggs from lobsters in an aquarium and he had become convinced that the greater part of lobster spawn is destroyed in this manner.

Sleepless Nights.

Who, those who have had the unhappy experience, can tell the horrors or appreciate the unhappy experience of persons troubled with sleeplessness? The damnable hatred of all the demons in hell for mankind must surely be appeased by the consciousness of such human suffering. The long, dreary, unhappy hours, who can describe them and why is it necessary? If you have ever been troubled you know what they are, and if you have been spared you have no interest in the knowledge of such suffering.

Mrs. A. B. Braham, Kalamazoo, Mich., after describing her suffering from sleeplessness, extending over a period of eight years, receiving at times only about twelve hours' sleep in a week, writes of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer as follows: "I began taking it in common doses and the first night I slept eight hours and had a nap the next day. Every night since I have slept eight or ten hours. Oh, how thankful I am for having had Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer brought to my notice and for the benefit received from it. Stop and think, eight years of sleeplessness and in a day, does it not seem like a miracle? This medicine is equally as effective in curing nervous prostration, spasms, fits, sleeplessness, mental depression, exhausted vitality, despondency, sexual and general debility. For sale by B. Van Den Bergh. June

THE TOLLERS OF PARIS.

A Near View of the Working Classes of the French Capital.

A People Who Are Fond of Wine and Song and Carole. About the Future—Their Feeling Toward Society.

In order to study the working classes thoroughly M. Henri Leyret, a literary man, started business as a marchand de vin, or publican. In one of the most crowded districts of Paris, says a writer in the London Telegraph. He has embodied his experiences as a maitrequet in a book entitled "En Plein Faubourg," which has lately been published by Charpentier. M. Leyret, after having denounced the bad drink supplied to the working classes—not always through the fault of the publicans, but, rather, due to the wholesale merchants—gives it as his opinion that those who live by the sweat of their brow have an aversion to debt. The bad payers and those who want drinks chafed up are the exception, and it is needless to say that they are the idlers, the loafers and the confirmed drunkards. These men neglect no opportunity of sponging or of obtaining drink on credit, without the least intention of paying for the absinthe or wine supplied to them. As a rule the laborious people avoid the taverns wherein the loafers assemble. The author also alludes to a discussion on Zola which he overheard. One of his customers, while gazing at a portrait of the novelist, maintained that the working classes had been libeled in the "Assommoir." "Is the workman," asked the anti-Zolaist, "to be represented as an eternal drunkard because he drinks a glass now and then?" The listeners applauded this speech, but another man stood up for Zola, saying that if the novelist had exaggerated a little it would be in the interest of the working classes, whose vices were to be attributed to the bourgeoisie.

M. Leyret met a confirmed absinthe drinker of a curious type. This man was one of the best carpenters in the district, and when sober was never out of work. For weeks he would refrain from touching a glass of the green fairy, but suddenly forgetting his good resolutions, would launch forth into a carouse on his favorite beverage, never going to bed until he had swallowed twenty-four glasses of absinthe, with copious draughts of wine in between. The author notes that the average faubourien workman is generally more given to eating than drinking. He eats meat, if possible, at luncheon and dinner, the former meal being the more substantial. He is careless about the future, and looks forward to dying straight off when he shall be no longer strong enough to toil.

Alluding to the pleasures of the people, M. Leyret is glad to state that Beranger's songs have not yet lost their charm for the toiling masses. As to the relations of the exos, the author of "En Plein Faubourg" says that free unions are increasing among the workers, domestic arrangements being made on a family basis. The girls who leave their shops and factories for the Champs Elysees or the main boulevards are, however, shunned and despised by the faubouriens. M. Leyret concludes his interesting volume by some observations on the feeling of the working classes toward the anarchist and revolutionary movements in their midst. At present, he points out, material exigencies and the necessity of living keep the average workman resigned, but a desire of revenge lurks in his breast against a society in which he has to toil without the hope of what he considers an adequate reward for his services, and without any security that after a life of labor he will enjoy some repose with a moderate competency.

CANNONS OF STONE.

Defenses of the Fortress of Malta Cut Out of the Living Rock.

The most wonderful cannons on record are those which are described by Byron, whose travels in Sicily and Malta won well-deserved renown toward the end of the last century. Many facts and stories he recounts that seem strangely old-world to us, though the date is little more than one hundred years ago, so grandly did the French revolution transform Europe. Malta was full of wonders, more or less droll, while the knights held it, but nothing equaled the stone guns. Everybody knows that the fortifications were cut out of solid rock, but Byron was right in saying that a kind of ordinance used to defend them was unknown to all the world besides.

As we understand his description, the knights left a great block of stone where they hollowed out an embrasure in the cliff, which afterward they shaped and bored in the form of a gigantic mortar. These engines contained a whole barrel of gunpowder. That shored in, they plugged it with a great piece of wood, fitted exactly to the bore, as a wadding, and loaded up with cannon balls, shells and other deadly materials.

About fifty of these remarkable guns commanded the spots which a hostile ship was most likely to approach. "The mouths of some are six feet wide, and they are able to throw ten thousand pounds weight of balls or stones." The range is not stated, but the falling projectiles covered an area of over three hundred square yards.

Every Horse Its Own Doctor.

A striking instance of animal instinct, or "horse sense," is revealed by the actions of an old horse owned by Henry Root, a prosperous farmer of Wissahickon, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. Mr. Root's horse has been troubled for months with rheumatism of the entire body, and all the treatment of learned veterinarians failed to relieve the suffering of the animal. One day, upon being turned into the meadow, the horse pawed up the earth with his hoof and stooped down to lick up the dirt. Almost immediately the beneficial effects were noticeable, and ever since the rheumatic horse has taken his daily dose of mud to the extent of nearly a half peck per day. He is almost entirely cured.
